

Disability Allowance Fact Sheet

At some point in your career, you may become disabled or too sick to work. The disability allowance is a monthly payment that supports you at a difficult time.

How it works

The disability allowance is the CSSB pension that you have accrued to your last paid date with your employer. The amount is based on the pension plan formula, which uses your years of service and earnings.

While you are receiving this benefit from the pension plan early, you are not actually retiring. Receiving the disability allowance will not decrease your pension at retirement.

For employees, the disability allowance is only paid if you have been approved for Long Term Disability (LTD) benefits. You can only apply for LTD through your employer.

Eligibility

Members must meet all requirements:

- an employee or a deferred member of the pension plan (deferred members have left employment but have still kept their pension with the CSSB)
- ten or more years of qualifying service in the plan
- under 60 years of age and age and service total less than 80 (e.g., you're 45 years old and have worked for 20 years, that's 65)
- not receiving a pension from the CSSB
- can't work because of a permanent disability (i.e., a disability that is likely long term with no known recovery date or is likely to result in death)

How to Apply

Manitoba government employees

1. Apply for LTD with your employer. Your application for LTD is automatically an application for the disability allowance, as referenced in your LTD application package.
2. Contact the CSSB to tell us whether you are single or married (or in a common-law relationship). Your marital status is required so that the CSSB can send you the right documents.
3. The CSSB will follow up and if you are approved, we will contact you to set up your disability allowance payments.

All other employees or deferred members

1. Fill out the disability allowance application form and send it to the CSSB. Apply for LTD with your employer if this benefit is available.
2. The CSSB will request a medical report from your doctor. You need to cover the cost of this report.
3. If applicable, the CSSB will request information from your employer.
4. The CSSB will review the information received and let you know if your application was approved or declined.
5. For approved applications, the CSSB will contact you to set up your allowance and make payment arrangements.

How long the benefit lasts

Once approved, payment of the disability allowance continues for your lifetime unless you return to work, or you no longer meet the definition of disability.

If long-term disability ends or is not approved

The CSSB can only pay the disability allowance to members who are approved for LTD benefits, or to members who have ended their employment because of disability.

If you are thinking about ending your employment because of disability, you can apply to the CSSB for the disability allowance before you make any decision. By doing this, the CSSB will be able to determine whether you meet the requirements for the disability allowance before you decide if you'll leave your job.

Good to know

Pensionable service while receiving LTD benefits

For many employees receiving the disability allowance, you will continue to build pensionable service even though you are not working. Your employer looks after your pension contributions while you receive LTD benefits.

Not every employer offers this arrangement. Always check with your employer to ensure you understand your benefits.

How LTD payments connect with the disability allowance

Most LTD plans set a maximum amount that can be received from all income sources. Most LTD plans will require employees to apply for other income sources such as your CSSB pension and will reduce LTD payments by the amount they expect you will receive from those other sources.

If you are approved for LTD, it's important to get your disability allowance set up as quickly as possible to minimize the impact of reduced LTD payments.
